Ocean Beach Growing Fast

POSTAL DELIVERY SERVICE EXTENDED ON SEVERAL STREETS

Postmaster Rankin announces that beginning July 1st, the free postal delivery service in Ocean Beach will be extended to include the newly paved streets of Delmonte from Defoe to Ebers; Santa Monica, from Defoe to Froude and on Voltaire from Abbott, one block, west returning by West Point Loma Boulevard to Abbott street.

Carriers cannot deliver mail, however until the houses have been numbered and mail boxes erected on the house or fence to receive the mail.

Carrier service will soon be extended to other streets now being sidewalked and paved.

Ocean Beach is growing and the delivery service will grow with it.

"Buy At Home" Is A Great Slogan

HENRY EULBERG CALLS SPECIAL ATTENTION TO FISK PREMIER TIRE PRICES

Auto owners in the beach districts will find it to their advantage to consult the striking display advertisement by Henry Eulberg of the Ocean Beach Garage, where special low prices are given for real values in Fisk Premier tires of all grades and sizes. Mr. Eulberg states a very pointed fact in his "Buy at Home" announcement. He says "When you can save money by doing it, why not buy where you sell—in our own town?" And the popular Henry also suggests that autoists fill their tire requirements soon, as the special prices may be withdrawn at any time.

MAIL ROUTES AWARDED FOR BEACHES

A contract for carrying mail has been awarded from San iego to Mission Beach via the training station. Loma Portal, Point Loma and Ocean Beach, 12 trips a week, to William Matthieson of San Diego. The contract awarded is for the term from July 1, 1926 to June 30, 1930.

EXPLANATION ABOUT PAVING BILLS

To those who may be somewhat mystified about the name "Voltaire" appearing on their paving bills from the bonding company, it is well to explain that the title "Voltaire" is the first street named on the declaration of intention for improvement, and that title includes all other streets, such as Bacon, DeFoe, etc. The name "Voltaire" is used for convenience and property owners are not assessed for that street unless their holdings are within the prescribed assessment territory of that thoroughfare.

FENCE FOR STREET

At the request of Mrs. A. C. Burch proprietor of Aligator Rock Lodge, last week City Manager Fred A. Rhodes got his street force busy and had a fence constructed in two days at the foot of Coronado avenue and the ocean front. And everybody's thankful.

JOHN P. MILLS WILL RESIDE THIS SUMMER NEAR SUNSET CLIFFS

The rather unique and finely situated residence of Artist Howard on the ocean front near Sunset Cliffs has been leased by John P. Mills as a summer residence for himself and family. Later on it is stated Mr. Mills will occupy a handsome home to be constructed on a plot in Sunset Cliffs. His brother, Mr. E. R. Mills, is already a beach resident, having apartments in the new Meade Quadrangle at Del Monte avenue and the ocean front.

"BEACH NEWS" TEAM GIVES GOOSE EGG TO OLD TOWN BUNCH

At Kickham's Mission Beach Skating Rink last Tuesday night, the "Beach News" team of Ocean Beach, walloped the Old Town team in a most spirited roller polo contest, the final score being 3 to 0. The contest was replete with thrills and if you doubt that the game is not an exceptionally strenuous one, just ask Loyal and Lester Near for particulars.

Ed Kickham's own Mission Beach Rink team is scheduled to battle the Ocean Beach boys on Thursday night, June 17, and the results will be bulletined below, if the smoke of the contest blows over before we go to press. These teams always stage a red-hot game.

EXCURSION TO BEACH BY CHILDREN'S SOCIETY DURING THE SUMMER

Happy days are announced for children of the Boy's and Girls' Aid society, one of the three Community chest agencies which care for dependent youngsters, have been planned for the summer vacation. Through the help of the Shriners and the women of the First Congregational church, each child will get several healthful outdoor outings. The Shrine has rented a cottage at Ocean Beach for the home, where groups of four children will be entertained in succession throughout the summer. The schedule will give each child a week at the beach, in charge of two matrons.

ELECTRICITY POSSIBLE CURE FOR DIVORCE

Circuit Judge Morrow, of Portland, Oregon, recommends the increased use of electricity as a cure for domestic unhappiness that so frequently ends in divorce. He says that a washing machine, a vacuum cleaner, an electric fan, a toaster, and other electrical conveniences and time-savers now so easily procurable, turn domestic drudgery into interest or real pleasure; and so remove the one great cause for quarrels.

GREENERY AND FLOWERS

The city beautiful plan is taking hold at Mission Beach. It has been noted that more of our residents and property holders are planting shrubs, flowers, and trees about their places this year than formerly. This is a wonderful step forward and it is only a matter of time until each house will have its own patch of greenery and flowers. It has been ascertained that a few sacks or boxes of earth brought when returning from a visit to a friend's or on the return from a day's outing is all that is needed when put as a top layer over the sand in the dooryard. Only a little effort will make each little dooryard a thing of beauty, and incidentally, add several hundreds of dollars to the value of the property.

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

Those residents of Mission Beach who are subscribers to the telephone company are hopeful that they will soon be recognized by that company as living within the metropolitan area of the city of San Diego, in other words, within the city limits of that city, and that the present toll of ten cents on each message coming in or going out will be eradicated.

Complaints against this toll of 10 cents on each call have been made to the railroad commission of the State of California by citizens of Mission Beach and San Diego during the past year, with the result that a representative from the railroad commission in charge of a corps of investigators, has responded to the call and is now working upon the matter.

It develops that there is even now a means by which Mission Beach subscribers may be listed within the San Diego exchange and so be put on the map, so to speak. This has not been the understanding up to date, but is apparently on the records of the railroad commission.

OPENING OF SAFEWAY STORE

Special bargains in groceries and foodstuffs mark the formal opening Saturday, June 19, of the Safeway store in the fine new building next to the postoffice on Mission boulevard. A complete stock of standard goods is displayed to excellent advantage in the commodious new store and the prices and service are in accord with the popular favor achieved by the well known Safeway stores throughout Southern California.

The Mu Omega Phi sorority entertained with a beach party last Tuesday evening. Surf swimming was followed by supper and an informal evening of bridge at the home of Miss Evalynn Rice, 834 Jamaica Court. Guests were Miss Corrinne Bengston, Miss Jewell Robinson, Miss Lita Brown, Miss Elise Kelly, Miss Alice Van Buren and Mrs. Irene Hayward. Members of the sorority and hostesses of the evening were Miss Eleantor Shields, Miss Vivian Kirkpatrick, Miss Dorothy Dean, Miss Virginia Townsend, Miss Elizabeth Mueller, Miss Helen Kilty, Miss Lois Greason, Miss Josephine Irving, Miss Evalynn Rice and Mrs. Henry Bub.

OPENING OF "OUR DRUG STORE"

The formal opening of the new drug store in the Challand building in the center of the north end of Mission Beach of which Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Makoske, both registered pharmacists, are proprietors, and which has been operating informally for the past few weeks, will be held Saturday, June 19. On this date ice cream cones will be given to the visiting youngsters and the ladies will be presented with boxes of candy.

The proprietors have in stock a full line of drugs and prescriptions can be filled at all hours as either Mr. or Mrs. Makoske is always present. There is also in stock a line of attractive bathing supplies, caps, slippers, beach balls, etc., toys, stationery, toilet goods, cigars and candies. The well equipped soda fountain and news stand have already proved their popularity, and residents will be glad to know there is available all kinds of kodak supplies with a 24-hour developing service. Films left before 1 p. m. can be obtained at that hour the next day.

In their short stay on the beach, both Mr. and Mrs. Makoske have won the confidence and good-will of the people. Their success in this enterprise is the sincere wish as well as the hearty belief of their many friends.

ORGANIZING UNION CHURCH

Those interested in the organization of a union church at Mission Beach are requested to meet at the service held in the school building on Santa Barbara Place next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. Reed, who has been giving some splendid services, will also serve in the organization work. It is hoped that all of those who have been prevented from attending the Sunday school lately are again able to be present.

BUNGALOW ON WHEELS

George Kirtchorfer, the well known interior decorator of Phoenix, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McCoy one evening this week. Mr. Kirtchorfer is motoring through the country in his palatial bungalow on wheels. The limousine is beautifully decorated and has all the comforts of home in its small compass.

M. B. BRIDGE CLUB

The Bridge Club met this week at the home of Mrs. D. H. Thede on the bay front. Those present in addition to the members were Mrs. John Allison Wallace of Beverly Hills, Mrs. W. G. Everett, Mrs. Betts, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. W. S. Hunt. Prizes were won by Mrs. W. S. Hunt, Mrs. H. B. Luke and Mrs. Rex Drew.

Mrs. Hugh Mackin of Jamaica Court, has as her guest, her mother, Mrs. Thornton from Stuart, Florida.

W. M. Irwin of Kansas City, Kan., was the guest of his sisters, Mrs. F. L. France and Mrs. Allie Warren last week. Mr. Irwin is highway engineer in the state of Kansas.

Mrs. R. Glenn Woods and son William, of Walnut Park, are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Loizeaux of Whiting Court. Mr. Woods will motor down from Walnut Park on Saturday, returning home with his family on Sunday.

FAMOUS DOG STAR AND T. N. T. OF COMEDIES AMONG FEATURE PICTURES

On Saturday, June 19th, Peter the Great, considered by many to be the greatest dog that ever displayed its skill in a screen drama, comes to the Granada in "Wild Justice". It was "Peter the Great" who but a short week or so ago, came to his untimely end, the victim of a bullet not intended for him. But, although the dog star is no more, his name will always loom large in human history. "Wild Justice" is a drama in which all humanity is summoned to witness with tender emotion one of the most beautiful stories of dog devotion ever told. Appearing on the same program, is "Big Boy," the juvenile find in "Bear Cats", a Scenic and a Pathe Review.

On Sunday and Monday, Corinne Griffith, supported by Norman Kerry, will appear in the screen version of Victor Herbert's Mlle. Modiste". This picture is by far Miss Griffith's best since "Classified", has been lavishly staged and beautifully mounted, offering this very popular star at her very best. Our Gang in "The Big Town" Mutt and Joff and a News reel will also be shown.

A fascinating story of the ever changing west, Harold Bell Wright's "A Son of his Father" is the feature attraction for next Tuesday and Wednesday, Warner Baxter, Bessie Love and Raymond Hatton are the feature players. In his sphere, Harold Bell Wright is the most popular living author in America. The picture was filmed in and near Tucson, Ariz., the locale described in the story by the author. A comedy, entitled "Hurricane" and a Fable will also be shown.

The T. N. T. of comedies, "That's My Baby" is the attraction for next Thursday and Friday. Douglas MacLean is the star, supported by Margaret Norris Livingston, Claude Gillingwater, Richard Tucker and Eugenie Ford. "That's My Baby" is laughing dynamite, which pops merrily along gathering comic momentum with every succeeding foot of film, and finally exploding with a dizzy hysterical and hilarious bang, at the height of a screamingly funny situation. A Sennett comedy, "Wireless Lizzies", and News will be shown.

STREET LIGHTS HELP TO PREVENT AUTO ACCIDENTS AND REDUCE CRIME

At least 17 per cent of all traffic accidents on American streets are due to improper lighting, according to T. W. Rolph, an illumination engineer, who recently addressed the society for municipal improvement. And crime is reduced by street lights, he said. The phrase "A street lamp is as good as a policeman," is no mere flight of oratory, and we need many, many more of 'em in the beach and bay districts.

AUTO ACCIDENT AT BACON AND VOLTAIRE

Just before noon last Wednesday an auto driven by J. E. Griffith of 1032 Wilson street, going west on Voltaire, collided with a car driven by Mr. Gass of Los Angeles, going south on Bacon street. The latter machine was swerved against a telephone pole and one of the passengers, Mrs. Bernard Channell, of 347 West Vernon avenue, Los Angeles, was seriously injured, while the other occupants escaped with a few bruises. Mr. Griffith was not hurt and his car was only slightly damaged.

MOVING-TALKING PICTURES

David Sarnoff, vice-president of the Radio Corporation of America, predicts that moving-talking pictures may soon be shown in every home by radio. He says the only problem is speeding up transmission of still pictures, and that research engineers are hard at work perfecting the speed-up attachments.

P. H. Tyler is building a retaining wall, costing $300 at 4727 Del Monte avenue.

Car Collision Ends Fatally

BEACH RESIDENT AMONG VICTIMS OF ACCIDENT NEAR MARINE BASE

Death's toll in the crash of a street car and auto truck last Sunday on Barnett avenue, near the marine base, reached three victims Wednesday morning, when Marion Finch of 1951 Cape May avenue, Ocean Beach, died in McCulloch hospital. In the same institution, Mrs. May Myerly of 3175 Market street, San Diego, is in such serious condition that physicians have little hope for her life.

With a triple inquest on the holiday ride tragedy, Coroner Schuyler Kelly has stated he may have to order a death probe over the bodies of four. Joseph Sharp, driver of the truck, was instantly killed in the collision, while a second victim of the crash died Monday.

The accident occurred in full view of hundreds of Sunday strollers and holiday autoists, and resulted in a traffic jam that was only unraveled when marines from the base took charge of the situation, narrowly averting several additional accidents in the traffic jam.

Safeway Store Opens In Mission Beach

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SPENDS OVER A MILLION FOR DAILY FOOD

Southern California with an estimated population of 1,750,000 spends upwards of $1,312,500 every day—or $39,375,000 monthly—for food alone, according to statistics compiled by Edward Dale, vice president of the Safeway Stores, Inc., operating 434 stores between Bakersfield and San Diego.

The chain groceries, operating as they do on a widely extensive scale, place considerable dependence on food consumption statistics from which their future expansion policies are largely determined. As a result of these periodical statistical surveys, the Safeway Stores have added Mission Beach to their list, opening a new store this Saturday, June 19, in the recently constructed Harris building, next to the Mission Beach postoffice on Mission boulevard.

"We have conservatively estimated," Mr. Dale states, "that the communities lying south of the Tehachapi as far as San Diego expend a minimum of $1,312,500 every day in the year on food alone.

"This is a highly significant item because its favorable reflection on trade and general business conditions. It means that in the course of a year's time Southern California's food bill amounts to $472,500,000 and will soon reach the enormous total of half a billion dollars.

"This amazing total may sound exaggerated to the average person. It is based, however, on an average of four persons to a family and a daily expenditure of but $3 to keep the family larder filled.

"It goes without saying that the million and more dollars expended every day for food supplies certainly helps in a substantial way to keep the financial circulation of big and small communities normally healthy and strong.

"The daily quest for food brings that people to the various business sections in which they at the same time spend their surplus money on other commodities. In fact, every business is more or less benefitted through this constant outflow of daily food-money.

"California—particularly Southern California—is growing in population faster than any other section of North America. Anticipating this constant addition of newcomers it will be the policy of this company to continue to acquire store locations in our present territories and adjacent communities."

AN ACTOR IN THE SHOE BUSINESS

By HERBERT L. McNARY

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

ACTORS are reputed to be poor business men as a rule, and it appeared that Ellery Crofton would be no exception to the rule. Ellery Crofton was a name with which the playgoers of a score of years ago were more familiar than are those of the present day; but Crofton had remained an active thespian until advancing age had made even stock company work too strenuous for him.

Now he was headed back towards the city which he had seen but infrequently in over a score of years, but which formed the setting for the pleasant recollections of his youth; the city he had always referred to as "home." Now he was coming home for good. It was a day he had long looked forward to, not exactly with joy, but with an acceptance of the inevitable; and he was not returning impoverished. He had saved nearly twelve thousand dollars out of all the large salaries he had received and this he now intended to invest in some little business that would net him a fair income and at the same time keep him active. There would be no benefits or "Actors' Home" for him; and now, as he gazed out at the broad expanse of green fields that rapidly swept by the train window, a benign smile on his unseamed features, he let his head, with its covering of snowy locks, sink back on the green cushion and permitted his blue eyes to close in reflection.

He was disturbed by the arrival back from the smoker of the occupant of the parlor seat next to his. Crofton opened his eyes and smiled friendly. The other man, with active small eyes, responded to the smile.

"We'll be pulling in soon and I'm glad of it. Travel much?"

Crofton smiled. "Considerable. I'm an actor—or I was."

"That so? Company fail?" inquired the stranger.

"No. I retired. Got a little nest egg I'm going to invest and take things easy from now on."

Crofton's eyes closed again reflectively and he did not see the stranger's eyes rest shrewdly upon him. Now the stranger spoke.

"If you'll pardon the question, about how much did you intend to invest?"

"About ten thousand," answered Crofton innocently.

The stranger smiled. "Well, it's fortunate that we met. Now I have a friend who owns the Ye Lady's Shoe Shoppe and it's a splendid proposition, but his doctor has ordered him to the coast. He offered me the lease, stock and goodwill for ten thousand. It's worth fifteen as it stands, but I couldn't handle it. Now you—well, you make a fine appearance, if you will permit me to say it, and that's an asset in an exclusive ladies' store."

Crofton listened attentively to the smooth stranger, and by the time the train had pulled into the station he was convinced, and in the end agreed to meet Mr. Elkins, the proprietor of Ye Lady's Shoe Shoppe.

All three visited the establishment on Sunday, for it was explained to Crofton that since the store was closed to business, Sunday would be a good day for conference. The store, done in maple and metal work of bright bronze color, with long seats covered with leather of the same bronze color, appealed to the old actor's esthetic tastes. It did seem that he was getting quite a bargain. The stock alone, consisting largely of shoes of black with white tops, had a book value of over ten thousand. Of course, there was a payment due, but with the shoes retailing at six dollars a pair this bill could be quickly met. Before they left the store the transfer was made and the old actor became the new owner of Ye Lady's Shoe Shoppe.

Monday Crofton was on hand early for business, retaining the three clerks and cashier. The store was in a good location and throngs passed by—but few entered. Tuesday and Wednesday showed the same lack of business, and lines began to appear on Crofton's kind features. On Friday a sharp-featured business man entered and briskly sought out Crofton.

"I'm ready to make you an offer of two dollars a pair for your black and white shoes—for the lot."

Crofton gasped. "But they cost over four a pair."

The other made a broad gesture. "What of it? They're not going. We can sell 'em on our bargain counter. What do you say?" But Crofton couldn't say anything, he was white and speechless.

The bargain seeker looked at him searchingly and then his bright eyes lit up with understanding. "I guess you must have bought this stock at its book value. You didn't know this style had gone out. That's what makes ladies' wear so risky; the styles can change over night. Well, when you're ready to sell I can give as good a price as anyone. Here's my card."

In a daze Crofton walked to the back of the store and slumped down. He could sell the stock for barely enough to pay the final payment he had assumed. He would be wiped out. It was the "Actors' Home" for him, after all.

Two girls entered and, to divert his mind from his misfortune, Crofton hastened forward to wait on them himself. One of them wanted a pair of gray shoes she had seen in the window. Crofton brought a pair to her in time to hear the other girl say:

"I'll need a pair of white ones for an evening dress I'm having held for me in Marston's—a wonderful bargain."

"Long or short?" asked the other girl.

"Long."

"I thought so. Don't take it, Cora. I saw Irene Steele in 'Black and White' in New York and all the gowns she wore in that picture were at least ten inches from the ground."

The girl bought the shoes and the two departed. Crofton smiled weakly. This was the kind of business in which he had sunk his money—influenced by what a "movie" star wore! Again he retired to the back of the store. A newspaper was there and he picked it up and instinctively turned to the dramatic page. A picture looked out at him. Irene Steele, herself. Because of his long association with the stage he had been somewhat prejudiced against this comparatively new form of art; but he knew that Irene Steele had become the latest idol of filmland, largely through her great success in "Black and White."

There was something appealing in the demure and dainty expression, and then he caught something in the article that demanded his attention. "The daughter of Elsie Salinger—" Elsie, who had played with him nearly twenty years ago—why this was little Irene herself. Her father's name had been Steele—and this was little Irene. Yesterday, the child he told fairy stories; and today a great star.

She was coming here Saturday to appear in person at the opening performance of the picture on Monday. "The star of 'Black and White' to be the guest of the Morning Mail," he read. "Black and White," he mused "black and white shoes"—slowly he laid aside the paper.

Saturday afternoon came and Irene Steele was in the city. She had left word that not even reporters were to be allowed to see her—but Crofton insisted his card be taken up.

Irene received him; greeting him at the door of her room with both her hands extended. "Why—you're perfectly handsome with your white hair. Are you still acting?"

He shook his head. "I bought out a business with my savings—and I guess I was taken advantage of. I am loaded up with three thousand pair of shoes that are out of style, and a payment still due."

The sympathetic brown eyes of the famous star became moist with compassion that was quickly swept away by a bright smile. "But I can help you. I'm going to be frightfully rich with the profits on this picture."

Crofton smiled. "That's kind of you, Irene, but I don't want money. But you can help me," and then as she looked at him with eager questioning, he added, "by accepting this present."

Irene Steele took the box and opened it doubtfully, exposing a pair of small shoes.

"I hope they fit," said Crofton. "You see, they're 'black and white'—now do you see my scheme?" Her eyes lit up with understanding, but before she could speak Crofton explained his entire scheme in detail. "Now have that appear in the Morning Mail," Crofton said in parting. "I am sure it will work."

Thus it was that all the young lady admirers of Irene Steele who turned to the article on her in Monday's Morning Mail, read that her trip to this city had been almost completely spoiled. Just before leaving New York she found she had shipped all her shoes back to Hollywood save only a pair of gray ones. Now, ever since the success of 'Black and White' she had worn only black and white shoes, and the fad had caught on. Indeed, so great had been the demand that she was unable to secure a pair in New York before leaving to be the guest of the Mail. Even in this city her maid had been unable to secure a pair Saturday night. Now it would be the worst sort of omen for her to appear Monday night without black and white shoes—and then, on Sunday, she herself, had seen a whole widow full of black and white shoes in Ye Lady's Shoe Shoppe on Melvin Avenue! She was actually almost tempted to break the window! Every minute of her time Monday morning was to be taken up by her schedule, but at twelve o'clock, before anything else, she was going to the Ye Lady's Shoe Shoppe and buy a dozen pair.

When Irene Steele arrived at the Ye Lady's Shoe Shoppe she had to force her way through a lane of policemen to get into the crowded store; and long after she had gone perspiring clerks were still selling black and white shoes at seven dollars a pair.

On Tuesday three well-dressed men entered the crowded store and asked to see Crofton alone in his office.

"You got us," admitted the spokesman. "A pretty smart trick getting an option on the entire supply of the only factory able to turn out that black and white shoe immediately. Now you can't sell them all, so name your price."

After they had gone, Crofton looked at a check still damp with ink. "Well," he mused, "I guess we actors aren't such bad business people after all."

PHONE GIRL IN NIGHT CLOTHES BALKS BANDITS

Sticks to Switchboard Three Hours in Calling Out-of-Town Aid.

Fort Worth, Texas.—Miss Gertrude Medford, eighteen, telephone operator at Aledo, near here, frustrated a gang of bank bandits by "plugging in" until she brought to the scene a score of officers and citizens who battled with the robbers and drove them off empty handed, wounding and capturing one.

Gertrude has a night and day job, being assistant cashier of the Citizens' bank during the day and watching the town's switchboard at night, her father, D. W. Medford, owning the small telephone company. The bank which the three men attempted to rob is the one in which the girl works and it contained $3,000 in cash the night of the attempt. The switchboard is kept in the Medford home and Gertrude sleeps nearby.

Sticks to Job.

It was one o'clock in the morning when a slight tinkle aroused the girl. Tom Gray, deputy constable, was on the line.

"There's a big robbery in town," Gray said. "Get my brother on the wire and phone the Fort Worth police and others. It's at the bank." The girl, clad in her night dress, sat at the board from then until 4 o'clock in the morning phoning to officers and citizens of Aledo, Fort Worth and Weatherford, getting a score of officers and about thirty citizens before the robbers had a chance to flee with the money. A lookout warned the two men inside the bank of the approach of officers and a battle in which 100 shots were exchanged followed, Gertrude continuing her calls as she listened to the bullets.

Admits Fright.

"I never put on my clothes but kept plugging all the time until four o'clock," she said, "I won't say I wasn't frightened because every time I heard a shot I formed a mental picture of some one I knew getting killed. I didn't know what was happening outside. Fort Worth is but eighteen miles away, but after I phoned there for help its officers were in Aledo within twenty minutes.

Ed Winston, the wounded prisoner, has several aliases and was brought to a Fort Worth hospital and, according to the police, was identified as Stanley Wheeler, who had served a penitentiary term in Missouri and Nevada for burglary.

Posses pursued the other two bandits, but they escaped. The prisoner has refused to tell their names.

Wife and Baby Try to Go to Jail With Man

Omaha, Neb.—Mrs. Elma McDonald, twenty-five, of Eugene, Ore., asked police to put her and her three-year-old daughter in jail with her husband, Edward L. McDonald, after he had been arrested here.

"Unless you let my little girl and me stay in jail, we'll have to walk the streets," was the plea of the young Mrs. McDonald to Chief of Police Van Dusen. The chief would not grant her plea for a cell in the jail, but later she and her daughter were taken to a mission home.

McDonald is held for larceny as bailee, the charge being that he had paid only $15 down on an automobile in which he, his wife, and baby girl had driven East, half-way across the continent to Omaha.

Pays for Train Ride Stolen 25 Years Ago

Dover, N. J.—For a train ride stolen 25 years ago, Thomas Jennings of this place has just paid the Delaware, Lackawanna, & Western railroad $2.50.

Jennings recently began going to church, and his conscience troubled him. So he paid the debt with interest. He paid the money to Herbert Harring, ticket agent at Dover.

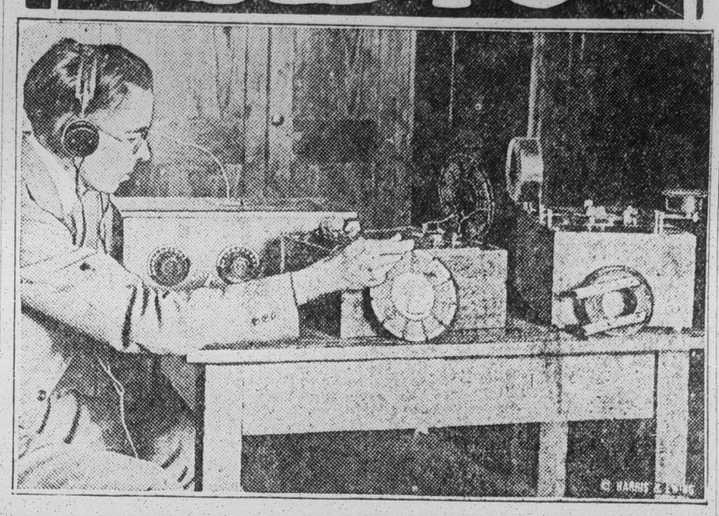
RADIO



Morris S. Strock of the Government Radio Laboratory Has Designed and Built an Apparatus to Measure Frequencies of Stations.

With short wave radio transmission now emanating from practically every corner of the earth, a tremendous interest in this form of communication is being predicted for this summer.

According to the most recent list of the world's short-wave stations there are approximately 130 transmitters operating on regular schedules on wave lengths between 13 and 115 meters. The total is expected to be almost doubled by the end of the year.

United States Leads.

The United States maintains the lead in the short-wave stations, principally through its naval transmitters and the experimental stations of the low-wave pioneers among the radio manufacturers. General Electric company, A. H. Grebe & Co., the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, the Radio Corporation of America together operate practically one-fourth of the high-frequency plants.

Included in the list of stations on low waves are transmitters located in Germany, England, Java, Sweden, Holland, Russia, France, Hawaii, Samoa, Canal Zone, the Philippines, Japan and aboard the ships of the United States fleet scattered throughout the world.

In addition there are many others operated by amateurs who have received experimental licenses to broadcast within the low-wave bands assigned for that type of work. Through co-operation of the International Radio Amateur union, which was created last year, the low-wave communications, both in code and voice, are being relayed extensively throughout the world.

"Radio Boat" Experiment.

Among the interesting experiments to be undertaken soon in short-wave transmission is the "radio boat" to be launched by the Grebe company, and which is expected to cover the Bermuda races, not only for short-wave receivers but for broadcasting by the higher wave stations.

The extent to which the short wave is being used for re-broadcasting in other parts of the world was shown recently in the announcement by the General Electric company that a scheduled relay of a program for the annual agricultural show of the South African Union was received clearly and re-transmitted. Included in the two-hour program was an address by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine and a concert from Schenectady.

Parallel Tubes Reduce Impedance; Aid Output

In various set building experiments going on there appears to be an inclination toward the use of parallel tubes, that is, two tubes with their grids connected together to the input and their plates connected together to the output circuit.

In studying this type of tube connection it must be borne in mind that the push-pull combination is not a parallel tube arrangement. It is more of a relay system. One tube takes up the signal when the other lets go.

In connecting two grids together both grids are at the same voltage at the same time. Both plates, being connected together, are at the same voltage at the same instant. But an essential in smooth action is that both tubes must be alike, which seldom happens. It is the same situation with a team of horses. Unless they are matched there will be a difference in the work they do.

Aside from these considerations, putting the input circuits in parallel cuts the input impedance to one-half of its value. Likewise, plate circuits in parallel cuts the output impedance to half value. In the output circuit, therefore, to match the tube impedance, the transformer or choke or resistance would naturally have one-half the impedance it had when matching a single tube. In other words, smaller chokes and smaller primary inductances will give better results than the high values, assuming the latter to be correct for a single tube. But another way, the cheaper types which do not give such desirable effects on a single tube should be better on the parallel tube.

Tube Insurance That Is Worth Remembering

Probably many tubes are burned out every year by accidentally connecting a high-voltage "B" battery across their filament terminals. There are many ways to prevent such an accident from happening, and one of the easiest is to connect a high resistance in the negative lead to the "B" battery. An ordinary 10-watt electric-light bulb is one high resistance which may be used for this purpose. If the use of the lamp causes a howling noise to be heard, shunt it with a 1-mfd. condenser.

ETHER WAVES

Never touch the inside of a set when it is in operation.

The most common source of trouble within a radio set is in the tubes or in the sockets.

The direction in which the antenna points affects the loudness of the signals received.

An aerial is not essential with a sensitive set employing two stages of radio frequency amplification.

When using the variocoupler as a single circuit set reverse the tickler connections if it will not oscillate.

Coils for high frequency currents should always be wound with nonmagnetic material, preferably copper.

The ground is one of the most important portions of the radio circuit.

Crystal detectors operate as long as the detector is in good condition.

Excessive resin from solder can be removed with alcohol and a soft cloth.

If a listener is bothered by having the station programs fade the cause may be with the aerial of the receiving set. If the antenna becomes loose and swings in the wind it will often cause weak signals.

America's Importance in Great Radio Field

Until radio became a part of American communication service, this country was, in effect, reliant upon foreign countries, especially in time of war. Since radio has been developed, however, the United States has taken its place in the sun, so to speak, and within the last six years has, through its private and public enterprise and initiative, given America direct communication with Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, Holland, Poland, Sweden, Norway, the Argentine, Japan, Java, Hawaii, Brazil, Chile, the Philippines, China, French Indo-China and Australasia. The American radio "network" is comparable only to the cable network of Great Britain.

Radiation Different From Regeneration

Many people have the mistaken idea that regeneration means radiation, or vice versa. This is not true. Regeneration and radiation are not synonymous, and should not be confused.

A radio set may contain regeneration in its circuit without offending by radiating. On the other hand, a so-called nonregenerating receiver may be, and frequently is, a most violent offender from radiation. A radio set radiates—sometimes improperly called "reradiates"—when the tube directly or magnetically connected to the antenna, oscillates and causes the antenna likewise to oscillate and give off energy.

Radio Transformers

If distortionless amplification is desired the transformer in the first stage of audio amplification should not have a ratio greater than 5:1. The second stage transformer should have a 3:1 ratio.

Good Work

Walter Hagen, the golf champion, told a golf story at a dinner in St. Petersburg during his Florida trip.

"A Scotchman," he said, "played a round of golf at a famous club. Afterwards, as he was taking a shower, they asked him how he liked the course.

"'It's not so bad,' the Scotchman said. 'I lost three balls, but I found eight.'"

AMERICAN YOUTH CANDIDATE

Miss Helen F. Dodge of Pennsylvania, holder of a Carnegie medal for heroism, has been nominated as a candidate for the American Youth Award established by the directors of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which is to be held in Philadelphia from June 1 to December 1 in celebration of 150 years of American Independence. Miss Dodge, the daughter of George H. Dodge of 5944 Walton avenue, Philadelphia, jumped into the Toms River at Ocean Gate, N. J., fully dressed, and, while having use of only one arm, saved the life of a drowning girl.

MR. AND MRS. J. R. MAKOSKE OPEN NEW DRUG STORE IN MISSION BEACH POSTOFFICE

Owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Makoske, both registered pharmacists, a newly-equipped, modern drug store will be formally opened this Saturday, June 19, in the postoffice building at 3742 Mission Boulevard, Mission Beach. The new drug store will be open every day in the year from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m., and their motto will be "personal drug store service". For the opening today (Saturday) free ice cream cones will be given to children. It is also announced that with every purchase of a dollar or over, a 50c half-pound box of Bishop's assorted chocolates will be given free during the formal opening day. A specialty will be made of ice cream for desserts and parties.

Balboa Theater

"Desert Gold", coming to the Balboa Theatre for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, is a story of the great Southwest, during the closing years of the nineteenth century. The picture which is a Paramount was directed by George Seitz, the man who made "The Vanishing American."

One of the most remarkable aggregation of champion western stunt horsemen were rounded up for "Desert Gold". The picture is realastic with its true western settings and finest western characters, including stunt riders, bulldoggers, ropers and branders. Nearly 200 Paramount players camped in the Morango Valley while filming the picture, the actual locations about which the story is built.

Added interest is centered in the return engagement of the Welsh Gleemen, touring the world, who appeared at the Balboa Theatre several weeks ago. This chorus of singers, known as "The Royal Welsh Glee Singers," is a notable one, and their return was arranged after many requests had been made for their reappearance, based on the public esteem.

Barnett and Clark, a clever dance team are also on the same bill.

West Coast Pictorial News Reel and other short reels round out the two complete shows each week.

Cabrillo Theater

"Bluebeard's Seven Wives," with an all-star cast comprising of many noted screen celbibraties, comes to the Cabrillo Theatre, starting Saturday.

The story of "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," traces the career of a young bank clerk who suddenly finds himself thrust into the limelight as a popular movie star. All is not a bed of roses, however, as his press agent insists on exploiting him as a modern Bluebeard, and this is neither to the bank clerk's liking nor to the liking of the girl he has selected to be his wife.

Surrounded by all delightful femininity of "Bluebeard and his Seven Wives," Ben Lyon romps his way through situations that alternate between the ridiculous and the romantic. At first he appears as a bashful, stammering bank clerk. Second he stars in a picture in a role of the Valentino type. Next, he is passed off as a celebrated Spanish film star by his press agent. Fourth, he assumes the part of Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet," and fifth, and last, he returns to his original self.

Raymond Godden is presenting a group of musical numbers, as harmonious accompaniment to the pictures. West Coast Kinograms and other short reels complete the program.

HARMONY AND HOSPITALITY OF TEXAS STATE SOCIETY

The largest, best and most enthusiastic meeting the Texas State society has yet had was held in the Harmonial hall, East San Diego, Friday night, June 11. Former Texans were there from practically every county in the great state of Texas. There were more than 400 of them, and they came from every walk of life. Harmony, the watchword of the society prevailed, and hospitality, that fine hospitality peculiarly Texas, was in evidence.

A business meeting of the Texas society will be held in directors' room of Chamber of Commerce, Monday night, June 21, to plan a still greater entertainment for July. A regular "Y. M. C. A." kind of drive will be started at once for 1200 members of the Texas society.

DAY DREAMS

Mother's Cook Book

Each day is a fresh beginning. Wise is he who takes today and lives it and tomorrow when it comes—but not before it comes. The past is of value only by way of the lessons it has brought us.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

A WELL-MADE salad is always an addition to any menu. The cook who likes her work will be learning new ways of combining foods and will enjoy experimenting.

Virginia Salad.

Cut cold cooked potato into cubes, using one and one-half cupfuls, add one cupful of cauliflower and cut into flowerettes, and three tomatoes cut into quarters. Marinate each of these vegetables separately in French dressing, using four tablespoonfuls of oil, two of tarragon vinegar, three-fourths of pepper sauce, and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Cut one and one-half cupfuls of chicken into cubes and three hard-cooked eggs into small pieces, mix with the potato, add mayonnaise seasoned with catsup. Place the chicken mixture in the center of the dish, cover with the tomato, garnish with cauliflower and lettuce, using them alternately. Decorate with hard-cooked eggs and a few nasturtium seeds.

Grape Juice Cream.

Take one cupful of grape juice, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one pint of cream, and sugar to sweeten. Freeze as usual. When properly made this will be the most beautiful watermelon pink, and it tastes as good as it looks.

Radish Sandwiches.

Chop fine a dozen fresh, crisp radishes, add four tablespoonfuls of chopped nut meats and four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. Spead on slices of buttered bread and cover with another buttered slice.

Sauce for Golden Frozen Pudding.

Beat the yolks of three eggs, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of mace or nutmeg and one-half cupful of sugar, stir and cook over hot water until thick. Cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs, let stand over hot water to cook. When cold add one-fourth of a cupful of lemon juice and one cupful of heavy cream beaten stiff. Serve very cold or pack in ice and partly freeze.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

ONSLAUGHT PILLOWSLIP

ONSLAUGHT PILLOWSLIP banged his fist down on the table.

"Where are we drifting to?" he demanded hoarsely of Peaspod Canebrake, who had just dropped in. "That's what I want to know, where are we drifting to? This country is going to the dogs and the pigs, and it's high time the decent people that are left did something about it.

"I for one, Canebrake, don't propose to sit idle and let this great land go to wrack and ruin in the hands of a lot of vile plunderers, robbers, self-seekers, highway robbers, and poltroons! Mark my words, Canebrake, if something isn't done, and quickly, utter chaos will overwhelm us.

"Are we going to sit with folded hands, I ask you, until the flood of lawlessness, famine and despair overwhelms us and carries us under? Action, Canebrake, action, that's what's needed. I for one intend to assert myself and help rescue our institutions from the mire into which they are already being dragged!"

"Pillowslip, I'm glad to hear you voice those sentiments," approved Canebrake. "Because, the fact is, the very reason I came to see you was to ask you to vote for Pinhedd Timbler, who stands for reform."

Onslaught Pillowslip's face underwent a curious change.

"By Jove," he muttered, "I forgot to register!"

Peaspod Canebrake left, but not before he had left Pillowslip prone on the floor with all the dining room furniture piled on top of him.

The Hotel Stenographer

By Roe Fulkerson

"KELLY, a good swift punch where it hurts is good for us now and then," said the Hotel Stenographer.

"Been getting your apple cart upset?" asked the House Detective.

"Yes, and then righted again and all the apples picked up, wiped off and put back so I would see what a bird of a cart it was and what a fine lot of fruit I had on it.

"I am a dancing fool. They put something in my feet when I was made like that instinct which makes a cat come home from any place, only mine is an instinct telling me which way the guy I dance with will shift his feet next. I never had a man dance with me yet who didn't come back for more. Add that the mirrors in the ladies' dressing room tell me that I am not alarmful hard for the nude eye to rest on and you know why there are few dances in my voting precinct little me does not get a bid to.

"Well, they organized a social club in my neighborhood and all the best dressers in the vicinity went in on it. They began a series of Saturday night dances a couple of weeks ago, so I got a new dress ready. But when all the invitations were out little sister was left at home to do a solo dance to a phonograph.

"Last Saturday night I got an invitation from a nice man. Kelly, I did not know how nice a dance was till I got left out of one. I had been upstage and haughty with a lot of men who might have taken me. From now on I melt like a plate of ice cream. I smile at every one of them that has two arms and legs. I had the time of my young life because I was left out of the one the Saturday night before. If it never rains you don't appreciate good weather. Every bump is good for what ails you, Kelly."

BE THE BEST

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

(There have been many requests for this famous little poem by Mr. Malloch. Here it is, as revised by the author.)

IF YOU can't be a pine on the top of the hill
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill,
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.
If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass,
Doing something for somebody's sake,
If you can't be a muskie then just be a bass,
But the liveliest bass in the lake.

We can't all be captains, some have to be crew,
There's something for all of us here.
There's big work and little for people to do,
And the task we must do is the near.
If you can't be the highway then just be a trail,
If you can't be the sun be a star,
For it isn't by size that you win or you fail—
Be the best of whatever you are!

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

MAKING YOUR MARK

EVERY day you are making a mark upon the tablet of time that the passage of years cannot obliterate or in any way modify or change.

Once made, whether ugly or beautiful, coarse or fine, this mark endures forever, becoming a part of your character, your soul, your spiritual and physical self.

It becomes a familiar signature by which you are known favorably or unfavorably to the world, your friends and associates.

It passes current for good or evil, for friendliness or enmity, for enterprise or inaction.

As your life advances it will be found to be the master key that unlocks the great door of happiness or misery, or the gate that opens to the fertile fields of usefulness or to the barren soil where nothing grows but tares and poisonous weeds.

When you get up in the morning with a scowling face, with nerves awry from a night ill spent, you are in a mood to make an unsightly, scratchy record in your Doomsday book, which lies ever open before you.

Be careful as you make the entries, for nothing can rub them out, not even tears or regrets. You may in memory turn back to the horrible blotches, scrawls and stains, but you cannot reopen the written pages themselves, for they are sealed till the end of your days.

You may be able vaguely to recall what you wrote, but the exact shade of the meaning of each word and sentence has escaped you. The tone or color is gone as well as the impression you had meant to convey.

Among the many thousand follies, insanities and eccentricities so often jotted down not one will return to you in its original dress, though at times you would give all you possess to retouch it and make a change in a few dexterous strokes which you feel now you are capable of doing.

Let this impulse to do better control in the future your fever of thought and keep it cool, peaceable and prudent.

Make no mark today that you will regret tomorrow.

Inscribe no word in your Doomsday book that will wound the heart of a friend or obstruct in the least your path to a clean and noble life, even though in following this high resolve you may be forced to make humbly many personal sacrifices; for after all the world's empty vauntings humility is the price which all humans must pay for honor, glory and fame.

Formal Lines Best for Small Gardens

After the furor of informal gardening following the deadly formality of carpet bedding, gardening seems to have settled down into an amicable and attractive combination of the two. Beds of formal design with formal or informal planting as suits the fancy, with an informal border of shrubbery, small trees and tall-growing perennials within formal lines as a boundary give the finest effect. The mania for meaningless curves designed to give nothing but informality has subsided.

It is not desirable to try to give the effect of the wildwood or stretch of prairie in a 50-foot lot, because it can't be done. It is so formally inclosed by fences and divided so distinctly by a walk that formality is its keynote. The garden may be laid out either in beds or straight lines or in beds of circular design. The circular design gives a surprising appearance of spaciousness to a small lot, but it is difficult to maintain the outlines of the beds without permanent edging after it is laid out.

Finding the center of the lot and driving a stake from which to draw circles to outline the beds is a simple matter. They can be cut with a turf edger, a hoe with a blade in the same plane as the handle and not at right angles as in the usual tool. The central circle is surrounded in a design of this sort with beds which are segments of circles, paths cutting the circles at right angles.

The center may be left an open grass plot, a circular bed, a pool, a sun dial, or a bird bath.

Proper Building of Chimney Big Factor

The matter of flashings is one that needs careful attention when a person is building a house in which he hopes to be comfortable and free from petty troubles. A most important place for proper flashing is about the chimneys. On a stucco home the chimneys usually are finished in stucco to harmonize with the rest of the house, but are of masonry construction, lined to conform with the rules of fire safety.

The stucco should be applied only after the chimney has been carefully covered with metal lath. Such a chimney always should have a cap of stone, cast concrete or other masonry which will overhang the metal lath and stucco and provide protection against water seeping in at the joint. Usually this is accomplished by providing the underside of the chimney cap well away from the stucco, so that the water will be carried to the vertical and unbroken portions of the chimney where it can do no damage.

Paint as Fire Protection

All property owners find roofing a serious problem. A roof can make or mar the character of a house, and because of its position, it must take punishment from all the elements; the sun blisters it, the wind and frost pull and twist its substance, rain and melting snow soak it with moisture. A roof needs protection. Paint and stain are the only insurance that can be bought which will protect the roof against the destructive action of the weather.

Paint is very durable, and in recent years has established itself firmly in popular favor as a roof finish. Moreover, paint has the added advantage of being fire retardant. When shingles curl at the corners, become fuzzy or take on a coat of moss, they afford lodgment for any burning embers that may fall upon them. Shingles coated with a specially made, fire-retardant paint will not "cup" nor develop "fuzzy" and the paint will resist a great deal of heat.

Too Little Individuality

Dream homes too often take substance as "rubber-stamp homes," Lionel Robertson, authority on interior decoration, declared at the "Own Your Home" exposition at Chicago.

"Home builders invariably ape standard designs. The result is that our streets throughout the country are lined with houses as alike as though they had been turned out of the same mold. People often undergo severe sacrifices and save for many years in order to be able to buy or build their homes, and yet they buy rubber-stamp houses that in no way represent their dream homes or express their individuality," he added.

Architectural design, Robertson said, should reflect the owner's character and tastes as do one's clothes.

Home Gives Social Prestige

The advantages of owning the house in which you live are many. In the first place, a home can be built for what is paid in rent. The home owner is looked upon in his community as a stable, substantial citizen. He has business opportunities that the renter does not have, while his family are accepted socially in many circles that are denied to those who live in rented houses.

GARTER SNAKE FAMILIES

"I don't care about big families," said Mrs. Single-Striped Garter Snake, known to her friends in the zoo as Nellie.

"You like bigger families than I do," said her mother, known as Milly.

"And you both like bigger families than I do," said another Single-Striped Garter Snake, known as Lily.

"I don't care," she added, "to have so many that there might be danger of their eating all the food that would otherwise be given to us."

"That speech makes you sound more like a pig than a snake," said Nellie, hissing and wriggling in disgust.

"Oh, you mustn't mind what she says," remarked Milly. "She can't help it that there aren't so many little snakes around her, as she is pretending she only likes to have a few around."

"You only have two more than I have," said Lily, hissing angrily, "and I am not like a pig.

"I'm like a snake.

"Does a pig hiss and wriggle?

"I'd like to know that! Of course I know the answer to it, but I just would like to see you give any other answer to it than the one I already know.

"You Mustn't Mind What She Says."

"I've put you in a hole, all right."

"You've not put me in a hole at all. I'm not in a hole and you can't put me in one."

"But I have trapped you."

"You haven't trapped me at all. I'm quite free of any trap."

"But I mean that I have given you no opening for any other answer than the one I already know."

"I don't need your gift of an opening, even if you would give me one, which you wouldn't."

Lily paid no more attention to this sort of talk, but went on, the way she had been talking.

"Can a pig crawl as fast as I can? No, a pig can't crawl at all.

"A pig grunts and squeals. A pig walks and never crawls."

"Why do you ask questions, if you know the answers to the questions yourself?" asked Nellie.

"That seems a foolish thing to do. When one asks questions it should be to gain more information and become wiser and more intelligent."

"Because I wanted to prove to you two snakes that you were wrong."

"I was the one who said you were more like a pig than a snake, so Milly isn't to blame," said Nellie.

"Besides I said that because you made a selfish, greedy speech like a pig, not because you looked or moved other than like a snake," Nellie ended.

These snakes were named the Single-Striped Garter Snakes because of a yellow stripe on their backs.

They were greenish-black in color, with yellow throats and yellow spots here and there on their skins.

The snake children they were talking about had greenish stripes, too.

"I have six nice little snake children," said Lily after a moment.

"To be sure you have," said Milly, "and I only have eight, only two more than you have."

"And you, Nellie, have fifteen or sixteen, I've forgotten the exact number, and that isn't really many. For, as you say, you like just your few children."

"I'm pleased," said Nellie. "No, I wouldn't want a big family.

"But let's not fight about it, for none of us really have big families."

For a snake thinks a family of from six to fifteen snakes is very, very, very small!

A Smart Boy

Freddie was sobbing bitterly in the road, and the kind-hearted old gentleman stopped to ascertain the cause of the trouble.

"What's the matter, my little man?" he asked.

"I've—I've lost my new ball," sobbed the youngster, "and I've no money to get another!"

"Never mind," said the old gentleman; "here's a shilling to go and buy a new one." And out came a bright coin which Freddie promptly pocketed. "Where did you lose your ball, sonny?" he inquired, as an afterthought.

"It went through your dining room window!" said Freddie, as he disappeared round the corner.—Tit-Bits.

Correct!

"Edwin," said the teacher, "use the word 'triangle' in a sentence."

Edwin: "If fish don't bite on grasshoppers, try angleworms."

HIGHER THAN WOOLWORTH BUILDING

The Yearly Sales of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is our highest building.

If all the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in one year could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building. And there would be enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have lots of work to do and I am not very strong, but I was getting worse all the time until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to lose my appetite completely at certain times, but I feel very well since I began taking this medicine. I think so much of it that I would go before a notary and swear to its merits. You could step into my home any time and you will find a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Frank M. Casey, 220 South 11th Ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Imaginary Feast

The expression "Barmecide's Feast," meaning an imaginary banquet, originates from a story in the "Arabian Nights" entertainment of a rich Barmecide, to whom a poor man, Shacabac, applied for charity, saying he was starving. The Barmecide invited the poor man to dinner and, calling for rich foods and rare wines, although none was actually provided, described each in detail as he urged his guest to fall to and enjoy himself. Shacabac entered into the spirit of make-believe and expressed his enjoyment of the imaginary feast. By so doing he won the favor of the rich man, who thereupon provided him with real food and later gave him a responsible post in his household.

Numbers World's Jews

How many Jews are there in the world? According to the expert, Doctor Lestchinsky, there were in the world only a few more than 14,000,000 in 1925, and the rate of increase is not great. Of the total, the vast majority, namely 9,232,276, live in Europe. America has only 3,844,089, and Asia, Africa and Australia insignificant numbers. In 1897, Europe contained nearly 84 per cent of all the world's Jews; today it has only 63 per cent. The Jewish movement toward the new world is distinctly visible. Now the Jews in America are 2.1 per cent of the total population.

Help That Achy Back!

Are you dragging around, day after day, with a dull, unceasing backache? Are you lame in the morning, bothered with headaches, dizziness and urinary disorders? Feel tired, irritable and discouraged? Then there's surely something wrong, and likely it's kidney weakness. Don't neglect it! Get back your health while you can. Use Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands, and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A California Case

J. B. Smith, retired blacksmith, 99 W. Villa St., Pasadena, Calif., says: "The kidney secretions contained sediment and burned in passage. There was a lameness through my back and when I stooped, sharp pains took me and dug in deeper when I straightened. Doan's Pills regulated my kidneys and drove the pains from me."

LINGERIE FOR SUMMER WEAR; OUTFITS FOR THE VACATION

GONE are the good old days when one type of undergarment suited everyone and all women owned "under-muslins." In the class of materials used now, muslin is away down toward the foot, while silk crepe stands at the head, with many more or less filmy rivals, between them—as ninon, voile, georgette, wash satin, rayon, silk-and-cotton crepe and pongee. Styles are almost as varied as materials and style is an important factor in the success of any sort of undergarment. The most practical minded of women demand daintiness and favor prettiness in their underthings.

Just now allegiance is divided between the straight line and the waistline silhouette, in combinations, and between the straight and bloused line in gowns. There is a flair for flares, in the filmier combinations and one may choose between tailored, semi-tailored and lacy types. Waistlines and flares are considered youthful and fine plaits are featured, just now, as an important adornment for nearly all kinds of lingerie. Alencon lace has taken on new importance as a trimming feature and white and flesh color are winning more attention in the best grades of silk underwear, than they have had for sometime. A pretty combination (shown in the picture) is made of flesh-colored crepe de chine and includes plaits, alencon lace and a waistline in its styling.

The newest arrivals in materials are rayon and cotton mixtures, and silk and cotton mixtures. The rayon mixtures are popular for slips and pajamas and, for the latter, are often patterned in stripes or plaids of vivid colors. The silk-and-cotton mixtures are printed in dainty floral patterns and are used with lace or net for combinations or gowns. Flowered voile, with net frills, is liked for gowns and dotted nets are used with all the sheer materials in yokes or banding, decorated with applique motifs cut from silk, and machine embroidered.

With the rank and file of sensible women outfitting oneself for summer means outfitting onself for outdooring—for outings, vacations, motoring, journeys and sports. Real sports clothes and clothes of the sports type have proved themselves the most satisfactory—come what may on the summer day. But it is not this dependability that has made them so popular—it is their becomingness and their casual and smart style. The sportish types in coats, skirts, blouses and hats are cheerful and allow the use of light or vivid colors, and one is well enough and not too much dressed in them for all usual occasions.

For coats and suits, tweeds, homespun, kasha, jersey, serge and flannel provide a choice of materials, and any of them may be used in the chic, separate skirts, to be worn with sweaters, jumpers or blouses, that prove themselves so useful. Crepe de chine is used for lightweight, plaited skirts and for shirts, along with other washable silks and cottons, that complete some of the coat suits. Printed silk blouses and scarfs in gay colors seem to add color to white costumes, when jumper, sweater or jacket is not fulfilling this mission.

Very large block plaids in serge make effective skirts and dresses with coats of plain colors to match the dominating color in the plaid. Large checks in white and a color make effective short coats, worn with plain skirts in a contrasting or in self color. Flared skirts and jumper blouses of kasha, in light or high colors, are among the most attractive models. Tweed coats, in fancy weaves, worn with skirts to match and contrasting blouses are not outrivaled in any particular for sports wear—these coats do double duty, being correct for general wear. A coat of cross-bar tweed, is shown in the picture, worn with a flared flannel skirt, a blouse of figured silk and a soft felt hat. All the colors of the rainbow are represented in the displays of sports and semi-sports clothes.

BETTER KITCHENS HELP THE HOMES

Some Points That Make for Convenience Given.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In line with suggestions from many sources for making better homes are several points on kitchen planning from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture co-operating with Better Homes in America.

One of the first things the homemaker thinks about in a better home, is a well-arranged, well-equipped kitchen. That does not mean that she is kitchen-minded either. It means rather that she knows where convenience counts most in a house. In most family kitchens at least 1,000 meals are cooked during the course of every year. Surely for any job that comes as regularly and often as getting three meals a day, every step saving, time-saving arrangement possible should be included in the plan and the equipment.

The points that make for convenience in the kitchen are as follows, according to the bureau of home economics:

First, last, and all the time in planning and equipping a kitchen, says the bureau, think about the work to be done in it.

If building or remodeling a kitchen, make it oblong and with no more floor space than actually needed. A kitchen is a workroom. Spaciousness is paid for in miles of useless steps.

Study the relation of the kitchen to the rest of the house. Make a direct connection from kitchen to dining room in the common wall between them. See to it also that there is easy access to front and back doors, to the telephone, and to the stairs to the cellar and the second floor.

Arrange for adequate ventilation in all weathers and for good lighting at all work centers at night as well as during the day.

Screen windows and doors against household pests. Flies particularly are a menace to health.

Choose finishes for floor, walls, and woodwork that are durable, suitable in color, and can be kept clean easily.

Select furnishings that fit the wall and floor space and will pay for themselves in usefulness. Weigh the pros and cons of built-in or movable pieces, and compare prices carefully.

Make sure that there is an abundant supply of hot and cold running water and a sanitary drainage system.

Decide on the most comfortable height of working surfaces.

Group all equipment, large and small, into compact work centers for preparation of raw food, cooking, serving, clearing away and dishwashing, and any other activities done regularly and often in the kitchen.

Arrange these groups from left to right, following the order in which the various jobs are done.

The kitchen is above all else a place to prepare and serve food. Limit the kitchen to this use, if possible, and arrange for laundering and such work to be done in another place.

View of a Two-Way Closet Between Dining Room and Kitchen.

Vegetable Juices Are Rich in Mineral Matter

Do not drain off the juices from canned vegetables, and throw them away. There is no reason for throwing away the liquor from canned foods unless there are evidences of spoilage, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Then the solid contents should also be discarded. The idea that canned vegetables themselves are safe to eat if the juice from the same can is unfit, has no foundation in fact. The practice of draining probably goes back to the days when certain vegetables were put up in brine too salty to be served with the vegetables. They then had to be drained and sometimes soaked in clear water to make them edible. There is no excuse for this practice now. The liquor around canned vegetables contains valuable mineral matter and draining it off means important loss in nutritive value.

Ice Cream Consumption Shows Large Increase

The consumption of ice cream in the United States has increased from 1.04 gallons a year per person in 1910 to 2.8 gallons in 1925, the Department of Agriculture has announced. Per capita consumption in 1924 was 2.5 gallons. The total quantity of ice cream consumed last year is estimated at 322,729,000 gallons, compared with 285,550,000 gallons in 1924, and 260,000,000 gallons in 1920.

Increased consumption is said to be due largely to improvement in quality and to nation-wider educational campaigns on the food value of ice cream. The popularity of ice cream has increased rapidly in England, Germany, and some other countries. England is reported to have increased consumption more than 100 per cent in the past year.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS AGAINST HOUSE FLIES

This Model of a Fly Shows How Easily Filth Clings to Legs and Hairs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The time to take precautions against house flies is before the first fly gets into your home in the spring and begins its egg-laying activities. A fly or two in May or June means hundreds of flies by midsummer from which there is no protection. It must be generally understood that if people were only sensible and would look for the breeding places of the flies, they could destroy the larvae before they become flies. In the country every householder practically breeds his own flies. In cities or towns it is distinctly the duty of the health officers to see that breeding places are cleaned up or treated. Where the health officers seem indifferent, citizens' clubs should be formed or existing organizations should take the matter in hand. Women's clubs have been very successful in this direction.

There are also certain precautions which the individual home may observe. Screens for the windows and screen doors should be looked over as early as possible in the season, to make sure that they are whole and fit well, and are otherwise in good condition. A screen having 14 strands to the inch will exclude flies but a finer mesh is necessary to exclude the smaller mosquitoes.

If flies have already succeeded in getting into your house organize a "drive" at once among the members of the family. Darken all rooms leaving one brightly lighted opening toward which the flies can be driven with swatters and towels. A good many flies can be excluded in this way. Sticky fly paper will help to catch the few that escape the "drive," or a weak solution of formalin may be placed in the various rooms. This should be put out of reach of children. To make it, add three teaspoonfuls of commercial formalin to a pint of milk or water sweetened with a little brown sugar. A convenient way of exposing this poison is by partly filling an ordinary drinking glass with the solution. A saucer or plate is then lined with white blotting paper cut the size of the dish and placed bottom up over the glass. The whole is then quickly inverted and a small match stick placed under the edge of the glass. As the solution evaporates from the paper more flows out from the glass, automatically renewing the supply. Many types of flytraps are on the market and good homemade traps are equally effective.

School at Gettysburg Was Battle Hospital

The building that housed the first classical school west of the Susquehanna river is still standing in Gettysburg, Pa., says the Baltimore Sun. The ivy-covered stone building, known as the Dobbin house, was erected in 1774 by Rev. Alexander Dobbin, a native of Ireland, who came to this country in 1773.

For more than thirty years, Mr. Dobbin conducted his school and many men, who later became prominent public citizens, were scholars. Early in the Nineteenth century the Dobbin school failed for some reason not recorded.

During the battle of Gettysburg the Dobbin house was used as an emergency field hospital, being at the edge of the fighting area. Men of both sides were cared for in the building. A spring of water in the basement was the mecca for hundreds of soldiers while the battle raged. Several families now occupy the property.

Plenty of Style in Africa

An American artist finds more well-dressed women in Algiers, northern Africa, than anywhere he has been since he left the States. The Algerians bob their hair, use little rouge, wear their skirts just below the knees and do not roll their stockings. Then by way of contrast a few miles away is the unspoiled oasis town of Bou Saada, which looks just as it did to Abraham. During his week's stay there the artist was the only English-speaking person in the place. . . . Why should this town be untouched by fashion and the other out-Paris Paris? Probably Algiers is more cosmopolitan.—Capper's Weekly.

Wives and Husbands

In "Wives," by Gamaliel Bradford, the author discusses seven famous women made famous only by famous husbands. The women are Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. Benedict Arnold, Theodosia Burr, Mrs. James Blaine, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. Benjamin Butler, Mrs. James Madison. The author contends that each of these wives was the intellectual superior of her husband. What's the answer? Women prefer to submerge self in mate even if they can outshine him?

Grandpa Roach's Story

END the roach nuisance now. Flit will do it. Flit spray destroys roaches, bed bugs and ants. It searches out the cracks and crevices where they hide and breed, and destroys insects and their eggs.

Kills All Household Insects

Flit spray also clears your home in a few minutes of disease-bearing flies and mosquitoes. It is clean, safe and easy to use. Spray Flit on your garments. Flit kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit spray did not stain the most delicate fabrics.

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. It is harmless to mankind. Flit has replaced the old methods because it kills all the insects—and does it quickly.
